

WINTERED TREES

Trees in Winter

Sing a song of their own.

Cradled in bark

Nourished in sap

Bathed in sunlight

They face howling raw winds

That stripped away their autumnal bouquets.

Meanwhile, their roots grow into spring

Whistling a symphony of green.